By Philadelphia Public Transportation

Philadelphia's mass transit system is SEPTA, Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority. SEPTA operates a coordinated system of bus, subway, elevated train, and trolley lines that covers all of Philadelphia and parts of the surrounding counties. Exact change ($2.00) or a token is required. Weekly and monthly SEPTA TransPasses are also available. Tokens are available at all subway stations, and both TransPasses and tokens can be purchased on campus at the Penn Book Store. Fares are subject to change.

For More information on SEPTA services, visit their website at www.septa.org.

There are many other transportation systems that link to and support SEPTA throughout the region. This provides a comprehensive means of traveling to Philadelphia and Penn's campus by public transportation. These systems include:
